Laura Bush Unveils TeachersCount PSA Campaign with Support from Jones New York In The Classroom

NEW YORK (October 5, 2006) - Laura Bush was in New York City today to unveil a national print PSA campaign designed to raise awareness about the important role teachers have in our children's education.

Joined by Peter Boneparth, CEO, Jones Apparel Group, Diana Burroughs, Executive Director, TeachersCount, and John Squires, Co-COO, Time Inc., Mrs. Bush announced the campaign created by TeachersCount which features well-known individuals alongside the teachers who made a strong and lasting impact on their lives.

Mrs. Charlene Gnagy, Mrs. Bush's second grade teacher, who is celebrated in one of the 10 PSAs, also participated in the announcement. According to Mrs. Bush, "The ads we're unveiling today are new expressions of an old, timeless truth, and that is that each one of us are shaped by our teachers." She added, "We all remember the teachers who made a difference in their lives. I'm delighted to be here with my favorite teacher, Mrs. Charlene Gnagy."

Each print PSA includes a description of the pivotal role the teacher played to demonstrate the campaign's tagline, "Behind every famous person is a fabulous teacher."
